ALOHA!

Duncan O'Brien brings his lifelong passion and decades of research to life in an original series of Enrichment Presentations that cover the glamorous and colorful history of passenger ship travel on the Pacific Ocean, between California, Hawai'i, the South Seas, New Zealand and Australia.

In 1962, Duncan's parents met aboard the Matson liner S.S. Monterey on a voyage to Australia, and as a child Duncan experienced the thrill of Pacific crossings with his family. This personal connection to the steamship era, and a background in the media, as a historian and content creator, have made him uniquely qualified to share these wonderful memories of the "good old days."

CELEBRATING THE "GRAND MANNER"

Duncan's vivid presentations are like a 45-minute journey in a time machine. Many cruise passengers are connected to the Golden Age of steamship travel, or had family members who crossed the Pacific, for leisure, business, or during World War 2. For newcomers to this story, it's an eye-opening and entertaining portrayal of the glamor, excitement and "Aloha" of travel as it once was.
